AN ICE-BOAT FOR THE HARBOR.

The merchants of Baltimore—the shipping interest, especially—should never let the press ent opportunity afforded by the sale of Government vessels slip past without securing that desideratum, a boat to keep the harbor through the winter. A thousand fold important now, in view of the splendid future that is promised to our city by lines of steamers abroad, what would be our disappointment one day more, to find at the outset our harbor closed against their entrance, and they compelled to seek other points at which to discharge consignments invaluable to us as direct imports, the very objects we have made such efforts to secure.

And, in making arrangements for such a need, the provision ought to be so complete that it can always hereafter be relied upon.

It should be understood, beyond all doubt, that vessels seeking this port can always find shelter, no port not compelled the various departments of the Government are entitled to high commendation for the skill and energy they have displayed, to the Secretary of War is evidently due the credit of having given prompt direction to the measures of reduction and retirement demanded by the emergency. Whatever honest desire of opinion may exist as to certain acts of Mr. Stanton, none will deny that his promptness, nerve and comprehensive intellect we owe in a large degree the early success of our arms, as well as the rapid disposition of the military material at its close.

It is pleasant, too, to observe the spirit and enterprise of peace follow so rapidly upon the depressions and disabilities of war. The soldier has gone home to find abundance and ease of labor and good wages necessary to his willing hand—the officer has recovered his citizen's rights and returned to discover with surprise more clients and passengers than when he left for the camp. New life has been infused into every department of industry, manufacturing, mechanical, mercantile and professional. Every man seems animated by the resolve to make up, so far as in him lies, what has been lost by interruptions and changes incident to the unhappy struggle of arms from which we have just emerged.

But more refreshing than all else is the evident decline in the personal differences, at one time so apparent. Heart burning and bitterness are fast dying out. Forgiveness and forbearance are taking the place of inflexion and vindictiveness, and under the wise and humane policy of the Union we are fast returning once more to a Union of brotherly States, but of hands and of hearts. The streets of our city swarm with the residents of the North, and for four years to come, to Northern soil. On the other hand, and by the social firesides mingle forms separated by the dreary years of fratricidal strife, and the time approaches when the "dead past" buried out of sight, shall take a higher and prouder step upon the great highway of national power, prosperity and renown.

CHARITY OF THE STATE is secured by the use of Journal de Paris, which Mme. Emma Weller made in a case for imparting a beautiful complexion, and a soft, white and transparent skin, black worm species, small pores, and a smooth and even texture and discolouration of the skin, resulting from exposure or unhealthy action of the serous.

Sold by all respectable Druggists, Perfumers and Hair Dressers.

W. H. READ, 147 Baltimore street, General Agents.
